There will be music since there are stories to tell...

Rome based Mardi Gras is a rock act with a difference. Named after Creedence Clearwater Revival's last studio album, the band's musical journey is made of protest songs, poetry, prayers set to music, and a whole lot more. 2018 marks a new start for the band with a new line up and a brand new voice. Their latest single "Tried" has just been released in July 2018, "Shoes", a groovy soul oriented track is the first single released with the new line up in spring 2018. Mardi Gras has released three albums so far: Drops Made (2006, Goodfellas), Among the Streams (2011) and last, Playground (2015), a record where ballads, rock, funk and acoustic pieces of music are the playground for the band with all their influences. Mundy, one of the greatest Irish songwriters, is guesting on the band's latest album that was mastered by Simon Gibson at Abbey Road Studios in London. As regular visitors in Ireland, the band has forged long-standing connections with some of the best Irish musicians, playing as the support act for The Frames and Glen Hansard and sharing the stage with artists such as Mundy, Siobhan O' Brien, TKO, Micah P Hinson, Noah and the Whale, Billy Bragg or Jack Savoretti (not to mention the best Italian independent acts) to name a few. Liam O'Maonlai from the Hothouse Flowers features on their album "Among the streams" where a W.B. Yeats's poem is put into music. Two of Mardi Gras' songs, "The wait" and "Scarecrow in the snow" were listed on Neil Young's website "Songs of the Times" where protest songs from all over the world are chosen and listed by Neil Young in person. The band has also enjoyed great success attracting attention internationally on European and US based radio stations and becoming one of the most popular Italian acts with a constantly growing fanbase. Their singles "Feel Alright" and "Your Constellation" charted in Italy and their instrumental piece "Alys" is a soundtrack for the eponymous Italian Sci-Fi short film. In 2013 Mardi Gras had the privilege to play at the Sziget Festival in Budapest - one of the largest music festivals in Europe.

Press

MUSIC ZOOM:

Reviewing "Among the streams": Everything is clean, deep and honest. Mardi gras just want to do good music, to be listened to, steal a smile or drive a tear. Their sweet melodies and polished sounds cant leave you cold at all. "Song from the end of the world" and "Ballad of love" are two folk rock gems and their rendition of "Land of hope and dreams" is the real surprise along with the duet with Liam O'Maonlai. My praises to the band, a band made of great musical sensitivity".

HOT PRESS MAGAZINE (Debbie Shkow):

Mardi Gras are doing some interesting things, and seem to have the work ethic any band needs to succeed. They don't mention any specific Irish dates, but from their sound they would be worth the bus fare into town -if not quite the plane fare to Rome.

HOT PRESS MAGAZINE (Jackie Hayden):

You may have caught up with Mardi Gras from Italy when they joined The Frames for the Burn the maps tour. They re a tasty acoustic act. with guitars, drums and an intriguing vocalist in Silvia Olivares. "Conversation" opens on the "Knockin on Heaven's Door" riff, with Olivares quirky pronunciation adding to its charm. It's underpinned with a cute organ, but it drags a bit. The acoustic bass is the most attractive aspect of "Untitled". "Home Again" is another introspective song that benefits from the space they give the melody, and it has a nice open country feel. Good stuff that repays a little patience.

SENTIRE ASCOLTARE:

Reviewing "drops made": Straightforward, beautiful melodies which, together with the geometry of double bass-guitars-drums, recall Edie Brickell's enchanting circular mid-tempos (Untitled), the acoustic Dave Matthews at the dawn of his career (Conversation) or the sad solemnity of Gram Parsons revisited by Sodastream.
